WHATCOM RESOURCE INFORMATION COLLABORATIVE (WRIC)

WRIC is a growing group of people (50 individuals) and human serving organizations (35 so far), working to solve Whatcom's need to increase access to resources through creation of a resource information access system that is community-designed and owned.

The Sunburst Model, centers equitable access to information in the public utility to meet needs of beneficiaries with help of trusted messengers who advocate for the needs of populations they serve.

SUPPORTING & FUNDING THE HUMAN CAPACITY & RESOURCES TO CREATE, MAINTAIN, ADAPT & GROW AN EFFICIENT RESOURCE ACCESS SYSTEM

Phase 1A: Data Utility

- A reliable and searchable data utility with resources/services developed in open source technologies, adequately staffed to curate and improve inclusion and access for all, sustainably.
- This data utility is the foundation for integrated use with many external databases and websites, including care/case management tools in Phase 2.
- Data Utility information is freely shared.

Phase 2: Care/Case Management Tools

- Interoperability with platforms offering care/case management tools with bidirectional. cross-platform, closed loop referral systems that ensure protection of privacy and adherence to laws.
- The care/case management & the data utility form an integrated technology platform.

What will it take?

Phase 1B: System Navigation & Resource Access Training

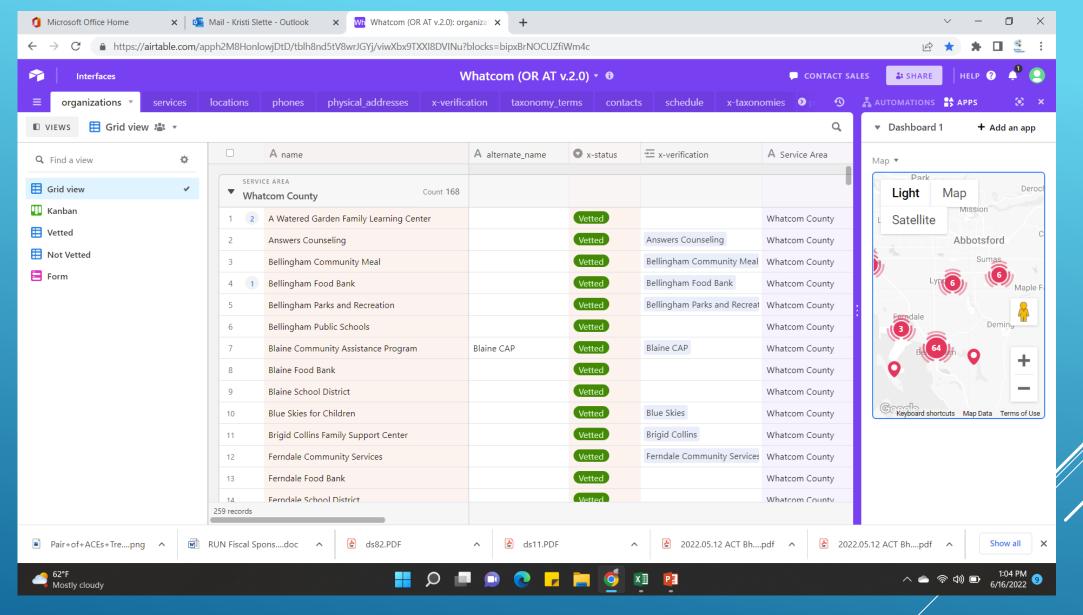

- Trained staff to support human services professionals to add and maintain current information, services and resources.
- Trained community members for selfservice use of database.
- Navigational support, when needed.
- Trained staff at community access points (like libraries, schools and resource service centers)--places to go with people to help access the information needed.

Phase 3: Community Information Exchange System

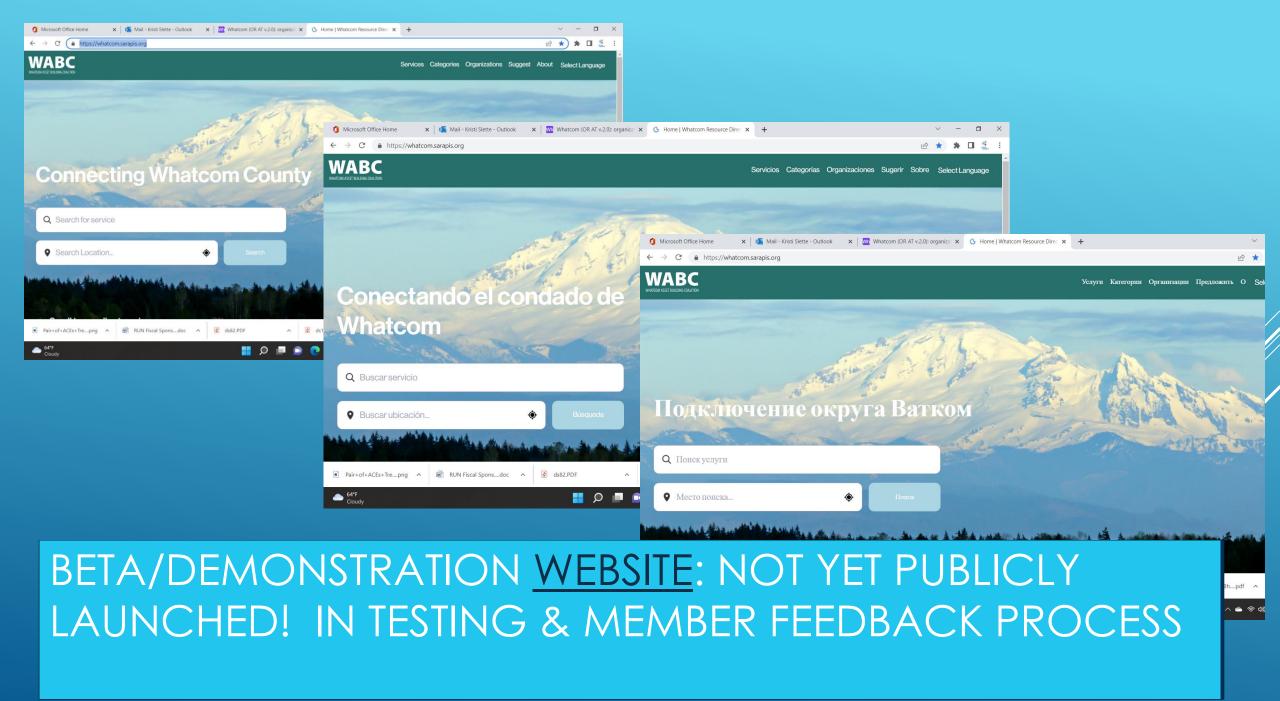

A county-wide commitment between human services providers to use shared language, a data utility, and the integrated technology platform to plan for and deliver enhanced community care.
